REPORT OF SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

To the Citizens of Gilford:—

Another year having passed away, it becomes the duty of your Committee to again submit their report of the schools for the year.

SCHOOL HOUSES.

During the past year there has been a marked improvement in many of your school-houses; some having built new, others having made needed repairs. There is need of still more work in some districts to afford the children comfortable places for study.

During the year, we have been called upon to locate school-houses in Districts Nos. 12 and 13. This unpleasant duty we tried to do, to the best of our ability, and for the best interest of all concerned.

BOOKS.

During the year, we have made some effort towards improvement in books. In writing, I tried to introduce the Copy-Books, that is, books with the copies set. I first tried, with a few of the best scholars, Helper' System, and satisfied myself that the books were too complicated and difficult for use in our common schools. Then, after examining a number of other systems, I adopted Potter & Hammond's Progressive Series. This series consists of nine books; commencing with the simplest copy and advancing to the more difficult. My object was this: to overcome a long-existing error, of changing our hand or system of writing nearly every term. If the teacher sets the copy, as no two teachers may have the same system of writing, with every new teacher we must write a new hand, and consequently we come out, at the end, with a mixture of systems, and irregular hand. By adopting some one system, we have greater advantages, and become better writers. While I am not particular in regard to whose system you take, I would recommend you to choose some one, and continue to use it.

TEXT BOOKS.

Some improvement has been made in text books, towards a better classification this year. By continued care for a few terms, as the scholars advance from one book to another, and parents purchase new ones, the evil of a multiplicity of text books may be entirely removed. We would call the attention of our successor, and of parents, to this subject.

DISTRICT No. 1. Prudential Committee, W. M. Goss. This school was taught by Miss E. D. Sanborn, who has been considered one of our very best teachers. At the first visit the school appeared very well, although we discovered a disposition, or feeling manifest upon the part of some scholars, which was not pleasant to us to see, although we did not then understand the cause; but we think, now, it was because the agent did not employ their former teacher. Miss S. having taught between thirty and forty schools in the past without difficulty, it appears to us that the responsibility of the trouble during the past winter rests upon the scholars, and they ought to bear it.

DISTRICT No. 2. Winter, Ada E. Sturtevant, teacher. This school was a success. The scholars though mostly small and not far advanced in their studies, made good improvement. The teacher has commenced well.

DISTRICT No. 3. Prudential Committee, J. C. Morrill. This school has had two terms, taught by S. Jennie Morrill, making six terms in all she has instructed it. At our first visit of the first term, the school appeared pleasant, the order being fair, but the scholars not quite as diligent as we would have desired. But at the second visit, notwithstanding the day was stormy, and few scholars were present, the recitations showed more improvement than at any past term of her labor with the school. At the commencement of the next term we did not consider it necessary to visit the school, and at its close was from town.

DISTRICT No. 4. Prudential Committee, S. S. Wiggin. Summer and Winter terms, Primary Department, taught by M. Anna Gilman. This is the third year Miss G. has been connected with this school; and one need only visit it to discover a strong attachment between herself and her pupils. The Summer term was eighteen weeks in length, but a good interest was manifest at its close. The improvement made was worthy the commendation and gratitude of the district. The speaking and reading showed training and taste. The recitations in arithmetic and first steps in geography, were excellent.

Higher Department, Summer term taught by Miss Sarah L. Merrill. In this school the improvement in reading was very good; the arithmetic, thorough; the geography well committed and the questions readily answered. The analysis and parsing showed study, interest, and an understanding of what had been passed over. At the examination six boys and thirty girls were present. This was wrong, and I fear some parents are in fault. Miss M. is deserving of praise for what this school has accomplished for the few past terms. Some body in this district ought to call the attention of parents to the sections of the School Laws which provides, "That every child under fifteen years of age not having attended school at least twelve weeks, and every child under twelve years of age not having attended school at least six months during the year preceeding, employed in any manufacturing establishment, the owner, agent or superintendent employing such child shall be fined fifty dollars." See School Laws, Chap. 7, Sections 11-13.

Winter term the same teachers were employed as in Summer. In each of the schools the efforts put forth by the teachers to elevate their character have been rewarded by the high moral and intellectual tone which prevades them.

DISTRICT NO. 5. Prudential Committee, L. C. Davis. Summer term taught by Alice J. Gilman. This was Miss G.'s first school. But at the first and the last visit, the school appeared well; order good; the teacher easy, natural and pleasant. The examination showed effort made for improvement; and while the scholars were nearly all small, the advancement was very commendable. The school, I should judge, was a success.

Winter term, Anna A. Gilman, teacher. This school was an interesting and profitable one. The scholars were nearly all small, but made good improvement. The district will do well to secure Miss Gilman's services the coming season.

DISTRICT NO. 6. Prudential Committee, Thomas Saltmarsh. First term taught by Mary A. Smith. The scholars in this district are few in number. During the summer term nearly all were young. However the school showed study, diligence, and good progress. The lessons were very perfectly and readily recited. Order good. The money well expended. Second term. Commenced by Emma P. Dame. At our first visit, we found the school in a good condition; the scholars were interested, and the teacher seemed active.

DISTRICT No. 7. Taught by Sarah E. French, of Lower Gilmanston. First visit, school gave every indication of being a successful one. Teacher seemed to understand her work. The scholars appeared to like their teacher, and to be interested.

DISTRICT No. 8. Prudential Committee, W. L. Thompson. Both the Summer and Winter terms were taught by Miss Clara E. Evans, of New Hampton, making five terms in all she has taught this school. The last term was affected somewhat by the sickness of some of the scholars. The progress of this school, and value of the teacher's labors can be seen only by comparing the condition of the school to-day, with its condition three years ago, when Miss E. took charge of it. Miss Evans and her pupils, with perhaps a few exceptions, if any, worked together hard and earnestly. The result was success. The parents and scholars in this district have learned to prize and appreciate the labors of a good and faithful teacher. May they be as fortunate in the future.

DISTRICT No. 9. Prudential Committee, J. M. Weeks. Mr. Weeks labored hard, and for some time, to secure the services of a teacher, and finally obtained the services of Mary Eaton of Meredith, a well known and successful teacher. But she, being taken sick the week before the school was to commence, sent her younger sister, Julia A. Eaton. Mr. Weeks, feeling that she was too young to undertake the school, but not knowing where to look for another teacher, placed Miss E., with my consent, over the school for a few weeks. Miss Eaton is one of the best scholars we have examined for years, but lacked the physical power to properly discipline and control some of the scholars. If the scholars had been obedient to the teacher, we have no doubt the school might have been especially profitable. We hope Miss E. will not be discouraged, for greater success is before her. To some of the scholars of this district we would kindly say: We are fearful you will look back, in years to come, upon your school days with many regrets.

DISTRICT NO. 10. Prudential Committee, D. S. Blaisdell. Summer term taught by Mary Ella Rowe. The fact that this was the seventh term Miss Rowe has taught this school is the best indication we have of her merit as a teacher. The advancement made in some of the studies was marked, and especially commendable. The school was a profitable one to the district.

Winter, E. S. P. Rowe, teacher. The school appeared well at my first visit: scholars studious; teacher appeared to be interested in securing the best advancement of her pupils. The same interest was fully sustained at the closing examination.

DISTRICT NO. 11. Prudential Committee, Samuel Flanders. One term taught by Mary A. Smith. This school opened well at the commencement of the term. We were well pleased with it. "It continued so for a few weeks, the scholars learning well," says the teacher, at which time some of the scholars were punished, which offended some of the parents, who took their children's part, which did the scholars injury,—also the school and teacher. This is no new thing in this district with a few parents. It occurs nearly every term, and nearly every teacher has trouble with the same parents. If it was not so we might censure the teacher perhaps. But we think those parents are doing injustice to themselves, their scholars, school, and teachers, in upholding their children in wrong and disobedience. They are committing an error. We thus speak hoping it may never occur again. Most of the scholars made good improvement. We did not visit the school at the close of the term, not getting notice in time.

DISTRICT NO. 13. Prudential Committee, M. C. Dexter. Summer term, Primary Department, taught by Annie C. Hurd. This school, the scholars being so young and so many in number during the summer, and the weather being so warm, is a difficult school to teach. Miss Hurd was a pleasant teacher, we think. The death of a sister called her away a few days before the school was to have closed: consequently there was no closing examination. We think, however, the term was an average one.

Higher Department, taught by Miss Ella J. Hill. This was a term of hard, studious work, both by the pupils and teacher. The closing examination, of a whole day, was very interesting, showing a good degree of thoroughness and proficiency in the different branches pursued. The examination was attended by a large number of parents and friends, who felt proud of their children, thankful to their teacher, and that their money had been richly invested. May the teacher be as successful in her new school.

Winter. The schools in this district commenced with the most flattering prospects of success, but after keeping a few weeks, complaints came from some quarters respecting the method of maintaining order in the school-room, employed by the teacher in the higher department, Miss Alice J. Gilman. It is very easy to find fault with any thing under the sun. It takes but little talent to do it. Of all descriptions of business, fault-finding is that which requires the least capital. It is easy to make a sweeping assertion respecting the character of a school, but is another thing to produce the facts to support such an assertion. We are obliged to confess that we were unable to see any wrong in the government of the school, but much to applaud, and our means of information have been as ample as those of any other person.

The school under the instruction of Fanny D. Pearson was a success.

The Primary Department, under the instruction of Carrie Brawn, was a profitable term.

Higher Department. S. Jennie Morrill, teacher. The closing examination showed a satisfactory result.

In closing my report allow me to say that in leaving your town for another field of labor, among the many ties I was obliged to sever, was my connection with the schools. During my labors with the schools, I have not had to expel a scholar, nor had really a case of discipline. My greatest regret while with the schools, was my inability to devote a sufficient amount of time to them. And I hope in choosing your next Committee you will select the man, or men, best adapted to meet the wants of the schools. I regard the office of Superintending School Committee as one, if not the most important in town.
